PAVING OF GLENDALE IS ORDERED

Four Inches of Asphaltic Concrete Is to Be the Base

PAVE CURB TO CURB

Construction of Cement Gutters and Culverts Included

The paving of Glendale avenue was ordered by the Glendale city council Thursday night. A resolution to this effect was adopted.

Four inches of asphaltic concrete base and one and one-half inches of top covering of National pavement wearing surface are to be laid from curbing to curbing between Cerritos avenue on the south and Lexington Drive on the north, including the roadway of all intersecting streets and alleys. The resolution also calls for the construction of curbing and cement gutter along certain parts of the stretch, and for the construction of re-enforced concrete and corrugated iron culverts at points where they are required. It calls, also, for the laying of cast iron water pipe along the entire stretch to be improved, the size of this depending on the proximity to the source of supply.

It is the opinion of the council that the contemplated work and improvement is of more than ordinary public interest and for this reason a district has been provided to pay for the work.

The motion to adopt this resolution was made by Councilman Horn and seconded by Councilman Davis.

Prior to the adoption of this resolution another resolution adopting Specifications No. 57 for the composition and the laying of the National pavement in Glendale was adopted. A resolution adopting maps and plats in connection with his improvement work was passed.

The ordering in of the work on Glendale avenue and specifying the type of pavement to be laid settles a lengthy argument with regard to the type of street to be installed. The original petition circulated in connection with this street called for cement concrete. A later petition called for Warrenite, while the third asked for the asphaltic concrete with National wearing surface.

During the past two months the factions boosting for these three products have been working industriously to get their particular type of paving accepted.

That the street should be improved at the earliest possible moment is generally agreed and a large number of the property owners are not particular as to what type of pavement is selected so long as it was a good pavement. Many owners feel that as the council members have given much thought and consideration to paving subjects they are in a position to know what kind of pavement will serve best for Glendale avenue.

It is understood that the paving of Glendale avenue will be rushed to completion.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK CALENDAR IS ARRANGED

Beginning June 17 Events Will Run Until the 24th

A calendar of events is being arranged for commencement week at Glendale high, June 17 to 22.

There will be three big days—Tuesday, when the ivy processional will probably be staged on the campus, possibly of the new school, followed by a senior banquet and class day exercises in the cafeteria of the school.

Thursday evening the graduation exercises will be held. They will consist of a musical program, a short address, presentation of the class gift and its acceptance by Mr. Moyse, presentation of the class by Principal Moyse to the board of trustees, and presentation of diplomas by H. W. Yarick, president of the board.

Friday evening the senior farewell dance will be given in the girls' gymnasium. It will be a simple affair so far as decorations are concerned, but an unusually fine program will be provided.

WEBB'S NEW STORE OPENS ON MONDAY

Everything Is Ready for Big Presentation in the Evening

CLEVER SOUVENIRS

Expected That Event Will Draw Big Representative Crowd

Announcement was made today that the formal opening of H. S. Webb's new department store at California and Brand will be formally opened Monday evening, June 4, from 6 to 10:30.

Everything is being made ready for the grand opening, which will be characterized by the giving of favors, and the presentation of a musical program including several special attractions. Due to the fact that the Webb Department Store is the oldest establishment of its kind in Glendale, and the management enjoys a wide friendship in the city, predictions are being made that the largest number of people to attend an opening night will be present at Webb's new store Monday evening.

When the store is opened the window displays offering some of the most attractive garments in Glendale will call forth the admiration of all. Special attention is being paid to these initial displays, and the work of experts will be represented there when the curtains are drawn aside.

Clever souvenirs will be given to all visiting the store on the opening night, and everyone will be invited to inspect each department, all of which will undoubtedly meet with the popular aproval, it is claimed.

HUGH WEAVER IS FINED FOR BRUSH FIRE AT MONTROSE

Hugh Weaver, student of Glendale Union High school and a resident of Montrose, was fined $25 yesterday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Harry Chase for setting fire to brush at Montrose without first securing a permit. The minimum fine was levied as the brush fired was on the Weaver property according to Mr. Chase, who also states that it is nevertheless against the law to do so without first securing a permit.

A clear understanding of the law regarding the cutting of yucca palms might eliminate the arrest of persons who unintentionally were violating the law in this regard. Dave Frederick of Glendale was fined $5 yesterday by Justice of the Peace Harry Chase for having a yucca in his possession. Mr Chase states that it is against the law to have a yucca in one's possession without having a written permit from the owner of the property from which it was removed. Even though on oral permit might have been given by the owner one would be subject to arrest without having the permit in writing.

CROW'S NEST PASS IN ALBERTA FLOODED

[By Associated Press]

SPOKANE, Wash., June 1.—Many towns in Crow's Nest Pass in Alberta have been floded by the bursting of the banks of Old Man River, after 16 hours steady rainfall, according to a special dispatch from Calgary today. Electric lights and power have been cut off, the telegram stated, and railroad and motor traffic is at a standstill. The town of Coleman is partly under water, mines there are endangered and light and power cut off. At Bluirmore six houses and the Victoria Bridge were washed away and light and power are suspended with some streets under 6 feet of water. At Frank, three feet of water covers some of the streets and the Canadian Pacific tracks.

$573,687 BUILDING THIS MAY

Month Closes $114,842 in Excess of That of May, 1922

NEW HOMES MAINLY

No Big Building Construction to Swell Total for the Month

Building permits for the month of May, 1923, totaled $573,687, according to the figures given out by the building department of Glendale this morning. This is $114,842 more than the same month last year when the total reached the sum of $358,845.

The building for May brings the grand total for the year up to $4,351,759, against a total for the same time last year of $3,219,642. These figures show that the first five months of 1923 is running ahead of the same months of 1922 by $1,132,117. The total for 1921 up to August 1 was $1 819,888.

The feature about the building permits taken out during the month just closed is that practically all of them were for homes. There were no big buildings during the month to swell the grand total. Almost the entire valuation taken out will go to house the thousands of tourists from the north and the east who will endeavor to find room in this city.

Most of the buildings for which permits were taken out last month are being constructed by owners. These people have been flocking into Glendale during the past few weeks and months. They have taken time to find the locations that suit them best and to arrange for the construction of the type of home that coincides with their fancy.

Some of these buildings are being erected by Glendalians whose homes were purchased at a fair profit to them by some of the newcomers to the city, who preferred to buy and secure immediate possession rather than take the time and trouble to build.

Quite a number of the dwellings were erected by local builders who seeing the need of homes in this city, are trying to meet the growing home demand.

The homes that are being erected in Glendale at this time are gradually becoming of a better class, which fact will have its effect on making a better and more beautiful Glendale.

The permits that were issued yesterday were as follows:

L. Langton, 1115 East Chestnut 5 rooms and garage; W. S. May, contractor. $3500.

C. A. Blanchard, 1034 Raymond, 5 room and garage. $3100.

E. A. Bowen, 1329 Virginia, 6 rooms and garage: William H. Sullivan, contractor, $5300.

A. T. Hapmann, 917 Academy place, garage, $150.

GLENDALE TO CLASH WITH OWENSMOUTH

Takes on Owensmouth Sunday for Second Game in League

BOOSTERS WANTED

Team Leaves Brand and Broadway at Noon Sunday

The Glendale team travels to Owensmouth to take on the team from that city in the first game of the second and final round of the Valley league. The Glendale team defeated them here in the opening game but from all reports the Owensmouth squad is a much improved outfit and are out to avenge the defeat handed them here. This is sure to be another nip and tuck game. The Glendale team has to knuckle down and play real ball to keep on the top step, for at present they are tied for first place with San Fernando, each having won 5 games and lost 1. Van Nuys and Lankershim have now hit their stride and are playing wonderful ball and are pushing up to the top very rapidly. By the looks of things this is going to be one of the hottest contested and most interesting league endings ever set up in the valley. Manager Wait will do the stuff on the mound with the same lineup behind him. The team leaves the corner of Brand and Broadway at 12 sharp Sunday noon.

Boys' Band Gains Four New Members

Additional enrollment for four new members was made at the regular practice meeting yesterday afternoon at the mechanical arts building of the high school of Glendale Community Service Boys' band. Mr. Gordon, representative of the Exchange club, was present and told the boys the interest the club is taking and also the fact that the club will sponsor the boys' band as its particular feature of Community Service work. There will be another rehearsal of the band next Thursday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. H. E. Cavanah is the director.

Firemen Twist the Ford Team Crank

Glendale Firemen defeated the Ford baseball nine by a score of 33 to 13 in a practice game played last night at the high school grounds under the auspices of Glendale Community Service. There will be a practice game tonight between the city employees and the Standard Oil team.

A meeting of all captains will be held Monday night at the baseball grounds to work out a schedule of games. R. E. Tucker, local Community Service executive, states that the lighting arrangements on the grounds are to be rearranged somewhat.

ROTARY BOY SCOUT CAMP IS ASSURED

INGLEWOOD INVITES

Civic Center to Be Discussed at the Next Meeting

Discussion of the civic center proposition occupied much of the time of the regular noon-day meeting of the Glendale Rotary Club, held yesterday at the Citizens' building, and will be taken up again at the next meeting. The meeting was in charge of George Karr. There were quite a number of out-of-town visitors present, including James E. Skelton, Byron Bodham, Nel Durbin and C. H. Burnett of Los Angeles, Jim Egan of Bakersfield, James W. G. Fullman. Other visitors included Ole Andreson, who was a guest of Jim Newton.

In the reading of communications an invitation was received from Inglewood to attend the presentation of the charter for a Rotary Club. John R. Williams, district governor, will be present and will present the charter. A letter was received from Rotary International stating that one of its major activities for the year would be the work among the crippled children. The Glendale club has been doing a great deal of this work for the past year. President Karr appointed the following men as a committee to handle this work: Ed Phillips, Jack Huntley, Ruie Downing, Art Dibbern and Dick White.

Gil Cowan, who spent considerable time in Sacramento during the legislature, was called on to tell of his experience and gave quite an interesting talk on the activities there. France Henry led the community singing in his usual snappy way.

President George Karr announced that the option on the Boy Scout camp at Haynes Canyon had been taken up and the securing of the camp was assured.

Dan Kelty, who is chairman of the public affairs committee, then took charge of the meeting, and gave a talk on the subject of "Keeping Politics Out of a Rotary Club." At a former meeting the president had requested the subject of the civic center for Glendale be studied over so that the members could be better able to consider the subject and this meeting had been set aside for a discussion of the matter. Val Hollister, president of Glendale Community Service, was called on and told of what that organization had done on the proposition. He also read a recommendation made by the committee. Ernest Ford was next called on to talk from the viewpoint of a school man, but he suggested that it would be best to hear from the high school first. As the time was short it was suggested that the matter be taken up at the next meeting.

S. P. DEPOT IS REFERRED TO C. OF C.

Council Declares Railroad Unable to Wait for Proceedings

NO FUNDS AVAILABLE

Deeds for Improvement of Stanley Avenue Are Secured

The Glendale city council at its meeting Thursday night referred the matter of the location of the Southern Pacific station back to the depot committee of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce. This action was taken on account of the possibility of securing the two lots at the foot of Cerritos avenue in time for the construction of the depot being extremely remote.

The following statement was issued by the council last night:

"On account of the fact that the Southern Pacific Railway company states that it cannot wait for condemnation proceedings on the property at the foot of Cerritos avenue before building its new Glendale depot and as the city has no funds available for the cash purchase of the two lots required at this time, the council has decided to refer the matter of the location of this depot back to the chamber of commerce depot committee for its action."

A map of Sparr Heights and one of the Tract No. 6711 were accepted at Thursday night's meeting.

The matter of the securing of property for street purposes at the intersection of Adams and Palmer, was laid over for two weeks.

The council was informed by Attorney John Everson that the deeds for the improvement of Stanley avenue have been secured, and he was instructed to meet with City Attorney Ray Morrow this morning to determine the best course for the city to pursue in this matter.

There were no protests against the establishing of a commercial district in Glendale avenue from Lexington to Monterey and the next step in this work was ordered taken.

An ordinance calling for daylight meetings of the council was introduced by Councilman Hall. It called for meetings to be held at 10 o'clock a. m., Tuesday of each week, and at the same time on each first and third Friday. Councilman Kimlin stated that if this ordinance is passed he will not be able to meet with the council, and Councilman Davis also voiced his disapproval of the plan. No definite action was taken in this matter.

Bids for the improvement of the first alley east of Louise street between Broadway and Harvard were opened and referred to the city engineer for checking and report.

As there were no protests against the establishment of a commercial district on lot 1 to 8, tract No. 6047, at Palmer and Vista court, the city attorney was instructed to draw up the necessary amendment to the zoning ordinance.

An ordinance abandoning the proceedings for the opening and widening of Kenneth road from Grand View to Sonora was adopted.

INTERMEDIATE GIRLS POSTPONE THEIR GAME

The game which was to have been played Thursday afternoon at Wilson Avenue Intermediate by the senior girls' baseball teams of the two intermediate schools, was postponed indefinitely.

S. P. DEPOT COMMITTEE ON STATION

Presents Findings on the Action by Glendale City Council

URGES CERRITOS AVE.

Declares It Is More Than Sectional Matter Here

Because of the action on the part of the city council last evening and referring the matter of the S. P. Station back to the station committee of the chamber of commerce that committee met this morning and presents the following:

The location of the new Southern Pacific station is more than a sectional matter, as it is anticipated that the station will serve not only all of Glendale but the Garvanza district, Pasadena, Eagle Rock, Montrose and the upper foothill section, and western Los Angeles and the Santa Monica Bay District. The new Santa Monica boulevard, York boulevard and Riverside Drive highways will make access to the station especially easy and convenient from all these sections. The closer the station is placed to Brand boulevard, the present P. E. tracks and the new Glendale-Montrose tracks, the greater the convenience and service to the general public.

Aside from the convenience features, is the matter of an attractive location that will give the right kind of impression of Glendale to the travelling public. The opening of a one hundred foot street from the station to Gardena at Cerritos gives a chance for an attractive highway entrance to the park grounds around the station that the railroad company itself will develop. At the same time, this location is within easy walking distance from the street cars and the railroad company will build a sidewalk from the station to Brand boulevard. It is one thousand feet from the Cerritos location to the street car, as opposed to two thousand feet from the Eulalia location.

The advertising feature of the station and grounds are much greater if located at Cerritos avenue, where all can be so well seen from the San Fernando road, Brand boulevard and Los Feliz road as well as by passengers on the street cars.

Assistant Manager Williams of the Southern Pacific has personally expressed himself as being better pleased with the Cerritos avenue location, and that he was glad to have the same feeling on the part of General Manager Dyer and Chief Engineer Bosky, all of whom personally favored this site in a conversation with members of the city council and chamber of commerce committee.

One big advantage of the location at Cerritos avenue is that the station will be a satisfactory distance from the lumber yards and other industrial activities on Los Feliz road and the right of way does not depend upon a little 30 foot entrance on Railroad avenue. Upon investigation by the railway committee of the chamber of commerce it is found that a large majority of property owners both in the southern part of the city and the city itself are in favor of the site at the end of Cerritos avenue. It is urged that the people of Glendale drive down to the present station and then on to the right of way end of Cerritos avenue and see for themselves how much more attractive setting the latter is from every point of view.

The Southern Pacific people have announced that the new Glendale station will be the most attractive of all their new stations between San Francisco and Los Angeles, and have expressed themselve as favoring the location at the end of Cerritos avenue with a hundred foot driveway from Gardenia, and that the station surroundings will represent an expenditure of around $80,000. All they are asking Glendale to do is to open Cerritos avenue through these two lots and incidentally this is a great advantage inasmuch as Gardenia now runs from Brand boulevard to Eulalia, or four blocks, without a closed street and this opens one in the middle of the tract.

The Southern Pacific Railway company has made the appropriation and let the contract and are ready to at once start the erection of the new station and the other buildings, and is asking only that the city of Glendale open a good wide entrance way to the station at the end of Cerritos avenue, that the Glendale station may have a roomy and attractive entrance and exit.

Advancement Association Committee Reports on Its Work

RECOMMENDS TYPE

Dr. Stuart Urges That Association Interests Be Safeguarded

The attendance on the meeting of the Glendale Advancement association Thursday noon was cut down to about 25, chiefly, it was believed, because members thought the day Monday instead of Thursday on account of the intervening holiday.

The chief business transaction was a vote to endorse the report of the lighting committee as submitted by Mr. Kinch, which recommends — first, uniform lighting standards throughout the city; second, that for the unlighted portion of Broadway extending east from Everett street a standard with a bracket carrying two lights of the lantern design of rippled glass similar to those installed in Hollywood, be adopted and that on the balance of Broadway the five-cluster lights which are said to be only 50 percent efficient be removed, the standards telescoped with the suggested standard for east Broadway and two of the lantern globe lights installed which are said to be 80 percent efficient; also, that the same style of standard and light be provided for Glendale avenue. To this end Mr. Kinch exhibited petitions bearing photographs of the proposed two-light standards which the committee proposes to circulate on Broadway and Glendale avenue before presenting the matter to the city council, so that body may know what the people want. In answer to questions Mr. Kinch stated it was estimated that the cost of installing the proposed standards on East Broadway in pairs opposite each other and 125 feet apart, would be not less than $3 per running foot. The change of the 5-light standard to the 2-light standard, as proposed, would be it was estimated, about $50 per lot.

Dr. Charles Stuart expressed the opinion that the interests of association members should be safeguarded in connection with the location of the proposed new Southern Pacific depot, and at his suggestion the association voted to appoint a committee of three composed of Messrs. McIntyre, Chandler and Lampert.

Mr. Stuart urged members to turn out in as great numbers as they did at the Los Angeles council meeting when the Glendale council "considers, as it expects to do tonight, the paving of Glendale avenue, and that this association recommend that all water and other pipes likely to be needed on that street be laid prior to the paving to insure it against being torn up in the near future." This suggestion was adopted and Secretary Nelson was instructed to send a communication to the council embodying the thought.

The railroad committee was instructed to take up with the Glendale-Montrose railroad the modification of the curve in its line at Glendale and Broadway, which it is believed swings too close to the sidewalk for the safety of parked vehicles.

Dr. Stuart, Mr. Kinch and Mr. Ingledue presented a composite report of the meeting with the Los Angeles city council in regard to Glendale's sewer proposition which was interesting but set forth the obstacles mentioned by council members, one of which was the impossibility of entering into any contract with Glendale until its people had voted the bonds for a sewer trunk-line. The question of maintenance was also considered to be a very important one.

P. J. Hayselden made an optimistic report concerning the Glendale-Montrose extension and its prospect of securing a franchise from the Los Angeles city council, its anxiety to get to work because the costs of material and equipment are mounting.

Mrs. Tight urged that the proper legend be printed under the picture of the proposed new hotel which has been placed at the corner of Broadway and Glendale, and Messrs. Mercer and McIntyre promised to see that it was done.

40 & 8 SOCIETE PROMENADE IS BIG SUCCESS

One Hundred Representatives From Outlying Posts Attend

Glendale promenade of the 40 & 8 Societe held last night at the American Legion hall at 610 East Broadway was a very successful affair, attended by 100 representatives of posts throughout Los Angeles county and also by three of the highest state officers of the societe. Among the Glendale boys who were initiated into the organization were Commander Day, First Vice-Commander Frug, Past Commander McBryde and Capt. W. A. Loving. Among the distinguished visitors were Grand Chef de Gare Herbert J. Simon, Grand Chef de Train Floyd Wilson, Grand Correspondent Ben Shinberg and National Vice-President Clarence Cronkhite, who came to Glendale especially last night to officiate at the initiation ceremony, which was very well put on and created a "deep impression" upon the newly initiated members. Dr. Courtiere of Los Angeles acted as conducteur of the meeting.

The Local Voiture No. 47 of Los Angeles county brought along entertainers who put on a program of song and dance numbers. The Voiture, which is the largest in the state and the sixth largest in the United States, plans to go to San Francisco in the near future as the largest voiture in the country. The membership in this organization is increasing rapidly and it is anticipated that it will not be long before their goal is reached.

The regular meeting of Glendale post No. 127 of the American Legion will be held tonight and will be the first June program to be put on under the direction of Walter A. Grayson.

Fred Peck to Represent Glendale for Cup Trophy

Just how large a delegation will go to South Pasadena this evening to attend the oratorical which will determine the championship of the Southern California League and in which Fred Peck will represent Glendale High. The cup for which he will compete was won last year by Paul Hutchinson. The school which wins it three years in succession secures it as a permanent trophy. Glendale High has one such cup won by champions in years past. His success to date is the best earnest of Fred Peck's prospects of winning this time.

The Individual Is the World's Big Problem, Says Engineer Wolf

MONTREAL, June 1.—(United Press).—The individual is the world's biggest problem, Robert B. Wolf, New York engineer and industrialist, declared today in an address on "Management Engineering in the Paper Industry" at the spring meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

"In no other period of the world's history has the group spirit found such material expression as in this twentieth century development of corporate industry," said Wolf, who was a member of the Hoover committee on elimination of waste in industry of the federated American engineering societies.

"In the past men have combined into groups for protective purposes, but never before have we seen such grouping of groups and these larger groups into still larger corporate units, and the startling fact is that most of this has taken place within the lifetime of the men who are still in active charge of industry.

"What is the meaning of it all and what is to become of the individual men in the process? This, I believe to be the most momentous problem confronting modern civilization, for if it is not solved civilization as now constituted cannot last. To crush out the individuality of the workman is fatal to human progress and it is also fatal to destroy the individuality of our manufacturing or producing units.

"There is perhaps nothing more concrete and practical and at the same time more abstract and theoretical than the problem of developing indivisible group of individualities.

Just as the man's interest in the future economy of his own performance is aroused by making him conscious of the economy with which he has performed in the past, so must the group consciousness of economy be aroused by providing a record of past group performance. Under group individuality (esprit de corps) is developed there can be no sense of responsibility and hence no progressive group accomplishment.

"It is obvious, therefore, that we must develop records for enabling the individuals who comprise the group to be conscious of what the group, as a unit, is accomplishing. Without this definite knowledge of progress made there can be no co-operative teamwork and the progress will be in the direction of quality, with little thought of improvement in quality of performance or economy of operation.

"The individual must be understood, and the whole problem of industry resolves itself into finding out how to enable the unit individual, the man, to become conscious of his relationship to the all-including group individual, the plant, and how to organize the plant so that it will be sufficiently sensitive to the welfare of the human units of which it is composed that it will not repress but encourage their individual development.

"The secret seems to lie in stimulating group consciousness within the organic whole of the plant by continuously recording the group's relationship to the plant on the one hand, and the man on the other and the immediate need seems to be for the education of foremen to intelligently direct the groups."

The most difficult problem that the paper-mill manager has to solve, according to Wolf, is that of overcoming the resistance of the practical operators to the introduction of scientific manufacturing methods.

MRS. TOLL TALKS ON FEDERATION'S NEW SLOGAN

To Be Seated As District President at Board Meeting Saturday

Mrs. Charles H. Toll, newly elected president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, has returned from the east full of the inspiration and ideals gathered during her attendance on two splendid national conventions, especially the General Federation of Women's Clubs which adopted as its keynote for the coming year, "Women As a World Power," with the aim of outlawing war and substituting something constructive in its place.

Her actual work as president of the district federation will begin Saturday when there will be a joint meeting of the outgoing executive board and the incoming officials when the work will be formally turned over to Mrs. Toll by the retiring president, Mrs. Urquhart.

She expects to be very busy this summer planning her activities which will include service on the state board, of which she is a member by reason of her office in the district federation, and which will require her to attend occasional meetings.

Speaking on the new slogan, Mrs. Toll said:

"An idea seems to prevail that women want to overturn governments. This is not true. We want to preserve the integrity of nations, but women all over the world are determined to put an end to warfare, to substitute something that will be constructive instead of destructive. If once public opinion is crystalized it can be abolished. The general federation is a fine source from which to send forth the idea because it is not confined to the United States, but includes women under eighteen different governments.

"Mrs. Thomas G. Winters of Minneapolis, the wonderful woman at the head of it, has a fine mind, a fine presence, and yet is thoroughly womanly. I consider her the biggest woman in the United States. She will finish her term of office here next June when the biennial comes to Los Angeles in 1924."

REX KELLEY IS OUT FOR BIG CAMP

Tells Advantages of Y. M. C. A. Location at Catalina

Secretary Rex Kelley announces that the Glendale district has secured the use of the Y. M. C. A. camp at Catalina from the 18th of June to the 10th of July. A larger number has signed up than ever before at this season.

The site is about 6 miles from Avalon, in a very picturesque situation and the boys will be accompanied by a fine, efficient corps of officers, which will include a physician, Dr. A. D. Smith of this city, who will look after the health of the campers and attend them in any emergency.

The first camp, which will be for the older high school boys, will last from the 18th to the 28th of June, and inasmuch as Glendale high will not be out then, it will be used by Burbank students and the camp will be enlarged to accommodate the older boys as well as the grammar school boys who wish to go later, or from June 30 to July 10.

The camp will be shared more or less with other districts and will have the benefit of outstanding leaders such as Harold Wagner, president of the student body of Occidental College; Lester Cummins, yell leader and president of the student body of the Southern Branch, U. of C.; Sam Sutherland, yell leader of Oxy.

Mr. Kelley will be at the camp throughout the entire term and it will be open to all boys of Glendale who make application in time, whether they be members of the Y. M. C. A. or not. An attempt is being made to finance boys desirous of going who have not the money to do so.

It will be an ideal outing for any boy because the camp provides so many pleasures, mountain hiking, hunting, fishing, boating and swimming, besides the camp activities.

An effort will be made to bring the camp up to the regular Y. M. C. A. standards along all lines and make it a leader in California. One of the requirements of the standard is that there shall be no leader under 18. To cover this point, camp committees are working hard to interest men of the community in this matter and persuade them to go as leaders. Each leader will have the supervision of seven boys.

Each camp is expected to have its camp council of boys and this feature will be inaugurated this year. The discipline of the camp will be handled by a council of boys, each tent to elect a representative on the council.

Another requirement is camp leaders who have had training in the conducting of camps, and this will be covered.

Experienced cooks are required and the camp will this year have the same colored men chefs who officiated last year. They are already busy planning their menus for the camp.

Definite plans will be made for camp programs including a variety of activities and interest in which the leaders will fill roles of interest, according to their experience, one being interested in woodcraft, another in astronomy, and so on.

Plans are being made now for the inauguration of an honor system of marking the points which will entitle contestants to certain credits or awards.

Babson Encouraged by Change in Labor's Attitude

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., June 1.—Roger Babson today states that there is nothing for business men to fear in the present reported demands of labor.

"A few months ago I was disturbed at the attitude of labor—especially labor in the building trades," says Mr. Babson. "Wages had only been partly adjusted, following the abnormally high wages during the war, when the 'business boosters' turned the tide and prevented any further adjustments. This was unfortunate for all concerned. I say for 'all' because when the readjustment in wages stopped, the reduction in the cost of living also stopped. Wage workers gain nothing by simply getting more money in their pay envelopes when it is offset by higher living costs. They can gain permanently only by producing more goods. Wage workers are enjoying better living conditions today—not so much because of their labor unions—but because of improved machinery, better management and the reduced cost of living, in the terms of food, clothing and shelter. This can never be brought about by raising plasterers to $10 per day. The higher the wages are in the building trades, the higher rents are, and no one—but the tax collector—gains anything through the rise in wages. This has been the situation during the past few months.

"There is today, however, a change for the better in the attitude of labor," says Mr. Babson. "This has been very evident during the past two weeks. Labor leaders are now better posted in the fundamentals of economics than they used to be. The abler labor leaders see the dangers of getting into another inflation of wages and prices before the present era of business readjustment is completed. Today the inflation of 1916-1920 has only been 60 per cent deflated. The wisest labor leaders see this and are putting on the brakes. They themselves are glad to see some of the proposed building programs suspended. Yes, the labor situation looks much better today than it has for many months. There should be no more radical advances in wages until the remaining 40 per cent of the deflation is eliminated and until we are again in a permanent period of prosperity.

"This means that business men should make no further wage advances except to even up and equalize certain departments. Employers should quit competing with one another for wage workers. Employees should seek to produce more, in order to get more in food, clothing and shelter for their weekly wage. This was the attitude of all during 1921 and 1922; but during the first four months of this year many employers and wage workers lost their heads. This is one reason for the recent temporary stock market slump. But both employers and wage workers have again come to their senses. At least labor conditions in most sections and most industries are better today than they have been during the past four months. In the meantime business is still holding up at 5 per cent above normal, as indicated in the Babsonchart, and the man who is doing a legitimate business—without speculating in either stocks or commodities—has nothing to fear."

LA CRESCENTA TO HOLD FAIR ON SATURDAY

LA CRESCENTA, June 1.—The County Fair to be held at the school auditorium Saturday evening, June 2, promises to be one of the interesting events of the week end. The affair is under the able supervision of the Service League of the Community Church. The proceeds are to be donated to the building fund of the church. A musical program of unusual merit and a splendid menu of cooked foods are among the attractions of the evening's entertainment.

PHYSICAL CULTURE

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

At this time of year, with its invitation to games and exercises in the open, it is perhaps not amiss to offer a few words of warning against overdevotion to physical culture.

Many people certainly seem to forget that, valuable and necessary as it is, physical culture should always be regarded as merely a means to an end, not an end in itself.

You will see such people hurrying, day after day, to the golf links, the tennis court, the running track, or the rowing dourse. And multitudes of others you will find addicted to long 'cross-country walks or longer rides on horse or bicycle. Their excuse is forever the same:

"I need this to keep me fit. If I were to miss my daily exercise I couldn't possibly do my work properly."

And undoubtedly daily exercise is conducive to increased efficiency as well as to the conservation of health. But this no longer holds true when the exercise means undue abstinence from work and unduly prolonged physical activity.

For such activity, however sincerely one may deny it, causes some degree of exhaustion, both lessening the ability to work to good purpose and actually diminishing the desire to work to good purpose.

Observe, for example, any so-called "golf fanatic," any young, middle-aged or elderly man who insists on his daily round of golf. Does he, following this, turn ardently to mental activities bearing directly or indirectly on his next day's work?

Not as a rule. His habit is, rather, to talk golf all evening, to engage in some light mental diversion such as a game of cards, or to drowse lazily till bedtime.

While next morning he may wake refreshed, he can hardly claim that he goes as eagerly to his work as to the afternoon game of golf with which he intends to round out a somewhat shortened working day. You will find, for that matter, that if your "golf fanatic" can afford to do so he will gradually cut his working day shorter and shorter, until there are many days when he does not work at all.

As with the "golf fanatic," so with all who surrender themselves too willingly to any form of physical exercise.

They may insist that the fatigue this occasions is only a "healthy tiredness." But it is noticeable that it disinclines them for creative thinking, and makes work more rather than less of an effort for them.

Cases are not unknown in which physical culture, unwisely pursued, has been seriously harmful to the health itself. The "athlete's heart" is not a figment of the imagination. And uncommon muscular development is by no means incompatible with low resistivity to disease.

In other words, any man who wishes really to profit from the exercise all men should take will do well to observe scrupulously the rule of moderation.

A little walking every day, an occasional game of golf, tennis or other outdoor sport will most assuredly help to bodily and to mental fitness.

It effects a heightening, not an impairing, of working ability. And this it will continue to effect so long as interest in exercise and in physical culture is held subordinate to other and more important life interests. It is when such interest is permitted to develop into over-interest that harm threatens.

Curing your Golf Troubles

By Jim Barnes

"Dear Mr. Barnes:

One of the most serious faults that I have in golf is that on most of my full shots I swing my left leg and side back as I swing through, finishing frequently with my left foot clear of the ground. What would you suppose is the cause of this, and what is the best thing to do to cure it? I will very much appreciate any information you can give me.

J. P. L."

Answer:

Your trouble is due to improper distribution of weight, and probably exists at the top of your back swing. Remember that you want to keep enough weight on the ball of your foot at the top of the swing to have a feeling of steady balance, even though the right leg is carrying the big part of the weight.

Then on the down swing you must turn your body in the direction the clubhead is moving. In other words let the weight of the body follow in and do not try to keep the majority of the weight back on the right foot. If you do that you are bound to lose a part of the hitting force that you ought to get. And of course the turning motion of the body is bound to throw your left leg and side around as you explain.

Of course the trouble that you describe is proof also that you are not keeping your head steady. Remember that no matter how many times you have had that told to you, it is just as important now as it was the first time you heard it.

"SIXTY CENTS AN HOUR" OPENS AT T. D. & L. THEATER

Walter Hiers, star of the Paramount comedy, "Sixty Cents an Hour," which opens at the T. D. & L. Theatre tonight is a genuine comedian, as the fine reception accorded the picture amply proves.

This comedy is bright throughout and scampers along merrily to a unique finish. The story is that of a soda-jerker, a fat young man working for a slim salary. One of Jimmy Kirk's ambitions is to take Mamie Smith, daughter of the bank president of Zavina, out for an automobile ride. When he hires a touring car at the rate of sixty cents an hour, the whole family pile in, and Jimmy's day is spoiled. His second attempt, however, is much more successful, for this time he gets a roadster and rides off in triumph.

But a dark plot is brewing; crooks are on his trail, for under the seat of the very car in which he is speeding is a goodly quantity of silver coin, loot from the raided Zavina bank, and they are determined to get it. But this is a far harder task than they had anticipated, and soon they find themselves bound securely and deposited safely in the bottom of their car by the supple Jimmy, who returns to tell the police of his find. Then the fun begins. This comedy has a most amusing climax.

Jacqueline Logan, in the role of Mamie Smith, is more charming than ever. Ricardo Cortez, Charles Ogle, Clarence Burton and others render efficient support.

"KINGDOM WITHIN" AT THE GLENDALE TONIGHT

A realistic view of the old proverbial old village general store, awaits those who will see "The Kingdom Within," which appears at the Glendale Theatre tonight. One can almost imagine one's self back in the old town of "Frog Holler." There is the same old stove with the sawdust box for the convenience of the tobacco chewers. Boxes and barrels are cattered around the store in confusion. Plug tobacco occupies a place of importance in the gathering around the stove. There is the usual group of characters who can always be found in the small town seated in front of the general store in the summer and around the stove in the winter. Their principal occupation is whittling, chewing tobacco, and passing around the town gossip. Some extremely humorous situations are supplied by the chief sitter, whittler, and tobacco chewer. He happens to be the male gossip of the town and the last word on all the scandal. He has, however, considerable competition on the part of one of the members of the weaker sex. Their endeavors to outdo each other pro vides some very amusing and humorous situations, which provide balance for the heart-tugging pathos which this story is said to contain.

Editorials by the People

Editor Glendale Press:

I wish some of the mothers and fathers of Glendale would pay a visit to the Children's Hospital in Los Angeles on Sunset boulevard and see for themselves what the children need. (just a kind word to cheer them, means a little ray of sunshine in their lives). Here are some facts:

Mr. Doroughly of Van Nuys keeps the Children's hospital in oranges and lemons.

The best doctors in Los Angeles and surrounding cities give of their time and services willingly, but they do not care to have any publicity.

The salvage department is a great factor in swelling the funds to feed the children.

The children are in need of jellies and jams, suits, coats, cloaks, underwear, shoes and stockings (ages from one to 12 years) as often charity patients have to make a presentable appearance on leaving the hospital. There are a few pay patients, some part pay, but 85 percent are charity patients. The Los Angeles fire department collects the above mentioned articles for the Children's hospital.

It costs between $9000 and $10,000 a month to run the hospital.

At present there is a waiting list of 10 for the orthopedic ward.

After a child is 12 years old it is not admitted.

At present white cotton stockings are needed for children from 1 to 12 years of age, also nightgowns and surgical dressings.

The hospital uses 100 T. and A. sponges and 1000 Mayo sponges a week.

The head cook is paid $95 and the second cook $65 per month. They have a dish washer, 4 girls for the laundry and a man ironer.

The dentists took care of 200 children's teeth last month.

A new clinic was given by Mr. Dahoney. It costs $1000 to endow a bed and $300 for a crib.

Mrs. Crutchen has been president of the Los Angeles Children's hospital for 17 years. She said she hoped next year they would have a new orthopedic wing and then she could use the present hospital for medical purposes and have a new kitchen and laundry.

There will be a benefit card party for the Children's hospital at the Ebel club house on June 6.

— Friend of the Kiddies.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

HEARTS

"I wish I knew," sighed the girl to her callers, "something truly practical about the heart. I think hearts are so interesting."

The man who had been disappointed in love stared dismally.

"Sometimes they are devastating," he said.

"The ones that palpitate and have murmurs and prevent one from taking out life insurance I suppose you mean?" said the girl, striking a match and applying it to a cigarette.

The man winced. The girl was so hopeless as far as apparent sentiment was concerned.

"Why are you so interested in hearts from 'an economic standpoint'?" he asked.

"If mine should stop," said the girl in a matter of fact tone, "I should be so hopelessly out of the running. And I want to do so much before I die. If one could only save one's heart and avoid all these later-in-life stumbling blocks, such as chronic heart trouble and the ailments that hinge upon heart disorders. Why don't we know more about the mechanism of our own bodies and less about cars and ships and airplanes?"

Pensively she blew smoke rings toward the ceiling.

"We can," said the silent young man in horn-rimmed spectacles. Suppose I were to tell you a great deal about hearts. Just glittering generalities, you know—such as we learn in medicine!"

"I should be enchanted," said the girl, going over to sit beside the youth who was studying medicine.

The other men groaned.

"The heart is a hollow muscular organ," began the student, "conical in shape and lying obliquely in the chest cavity.

"It is enveloped in a membrane called the pericardium.

"This sac is double.

"A small quantity of fluid lies between the two membranes.

"The heart is lined with a smooth membrane called the endocardium.

"The heart is divided into four chambers or cells, the two upper ones being called the right and left auricles, the lower ones being called the right and left ventricles.

"After birth there is, normally, no opening between the right and left sides of the heart.

"A large artery opens out of each ventrical, and two veins empty into each auricle.

"The veins have no valves, but valves guard the openings between the auricles and ventricles.

"The valve between the right auricle and ventricle is called the tricuspid valve, that between the left auricle and ventricle the bicuspid valve, and those guarding the openings of the arteries are called the semilunar vales."

Most of the party had moved across the room by this time, but the girl remained an interested listener.

"Arteries fascinate me," she murmured.

"The thing about hearts is that so few people give them a thought," said the young student. "Practically, the heart is an engine that keeps the body going. And we treat it rather badly, what with tobacco and strong drink and unnecessary strain—and all that sort of thing."

He looked rather pointedly at the girl's cigarette as he spoke, and after an instant's hesitation she threw it away.

"I hadn't thought about it that way," she admitted. "We are so inclined to take our hearts for granted."

About Retailers---

The Growing Mass and the Dwindling Class

—Goods which are well advertised nationally by the manufacturer are largely sold to the public before they ever reach the retailer.

—Goods which are not advertised by the producer must be sold by the retailer.

—In the one case, the manufacturer has done a great part of the job; in the other he has left it all for the dealer to do.

—For many articles, national advertising creates an actual demand, so that all the dealer need do is to say, "You can buy it here." In other lines, the advertising identifies the product in the possible buyer's mind, arouses his interest in it and establishes his confidence in the maker, upon which the dealer can cash in by his own selling efforts.

—But with the unadvertised goods, the retailer must start from scratch.

—Retailers who favor nationally advertised lines believe in selling what the public wants. They are a growing mass.

—Retailers who favor unadvertised lines believe in selling what they want the public to buy. They are a dwindling class.

—The ranks of these latter retailers are rapidly growing smaller because most of them are learning that public confidence is the basis of successful selling; that quick turnover is a shorter and surer road to profit than long discounts on slow-moving, dust-gathering goods—that even those customers who appear to swallow their selling talk on unadvertised merchandise have a discouraging way of not coming back for more.

—Just the other day a paint and varnish dealer in California wrote to a manufacturer in the Middle West whose name is known through national advertising wherever varnish is used, "We are discontinuing our other lines and hereafter will center our efforts upon (mentioning the name of the maker's product) because the demand is for it."

—About the same time a printer in a northern Ohio city was telling his paper jobber that thereafter he intended to standardize on a certain nationally advertised make of bond paper because "everybody knows it, and it is so easy to sell."

—And a druggist who carries packaged chocolates stated that he stocked only the nationally known makes, with the exception of one make well known locally, because all he had to do was hand out what the customer asked for and take the money.

—Ten years ago—yes, even five—the manufacturer's salesman who went around to the trade and talked about his firm's national advertising was likely to be met with the statement that it would be a lot better if his concern took the money it was putting into advertising and used it to enlarge discounts to the trade.

—Today, the fact that he is a real national advertiser is a tremendous asset with the trade to any manufacturer, and his salesman's portfolio of advertising is as important as—very frequently more important than—his sample case.

CONSUMERS CO., 225 S. BRAND, TO GIVE PARTY

New Milk Company Invites You to Try Its Ice Cream

Saturday will be a big day in Glendale. The Consumers Milk company of Los Angeles and Long Beach will open a retail store at 225 South Brand boulevard and to celebrate the opening, 5000 ice cream cones will be given away to those who present coupons taken from the company's announcement in today's Press.

The Consumers Milk company has made rapid progress during the past year. It was established as a result of the Los Angeles fight on the milk combine and the company is owned entirely by the people. A limited amount of stock is still available upon a basis which assures big profits to shareholders.

The opening of the Glendale store marks another forward step in the progress of the company. Two stores are in operation in Los Angeles and one in Long Beach. The big ice cream plant is in operation in Long Beach, while the milk plant has its headquarters in Los Angeles.

The company extends an invitation to the people of Glendale to visit the new retail store. Clip the coupon from this issue of the Press, and present it Saturday for a free ice cream cone.

To remove whitewash from ceiling dissolve one pound of alum in one gallon of strong vinegar. Apply with brush, let soak in well, and scrape and wash as usual.

OBSERVATIONS

BY A GLENDALE OLD TIMER

Perhaps there is no man in all America who is more unjustly judged than Eugene Debs. He is a treason spouter of the worst class, a defamer of the best government that this crude old world has yet produced. He was justly imprisoned for written and spoken crimes against the government during the war and, in my estimation, most unjustly pardoned. In view of all the above, one naturally thinks of him as of the soapbox orator type—ragged, filthy, long haired, foul of mouth, a hater of the American home. On the contrary he is a mild-mannered individual, a devoted husband and father, a kindly and beloved neighbor. He spouts treason but he practices loyalty to home and friends. Such a man is far more dangerous to the country than the ranting I. W. W. who scorns the home, jeers at family affection and hates his neighbors.

While we old-timers are willing enough to enjoy all of the modern improvements of the home, the business and public affairs, and would not want to go back to the many discomforts of our earlier days, yet there is one figure in our memories of the olden time that we sigh for, but he is gone and nothing can replace him. I refer to the good old family doctor who ushered us into this troublous world and probably did the same for one or both of our parents; who always responded, day or night, to the hurried call carried on galloping horse or by breathless runner; who jogged along the lanes and bypaths in all kinds of weather, with his medicine cases full of little bottles containing pills, liquids and powders; who called us all, parents as well as children, by our first names; who gave fatherly advice to the young boys and girls when they fretted under home discipline; who depended on drugs and careful nursing to effect cures and who held the love and confidence of the entire neighborhood. He was physician, surgeon, nerve specialist, eye, ear and nose specialist, dentist and general healer. He never got very rich but generally owned a good home, a team or two of good horses and a buggy or two. But he was a real man and he had more friends, by far, than anyone else in the community.

This good old English language of ours is bold and blunt and does not lend itself readily to musical sounds in spoken words, except in the inflated expressions of golden-tongued orators. There are none of the musical intonations of the Italian, French and Spanish tongues that are heard in everyday conversations. No English (or American, rather) names of towns, plains and districts have the soft liquid sound of the Spanish Loma Linda, Mira Vista, Palo Alto, Puente Alto, Ric Hondo, San Juan Capistrano, Llano Estacado, or La Palma de la Mano de Dios. This latter, which means "The hollow (or palm) of God's hand," was the name given to a desolate stretch of burning desert land in southeastern California, now reclaimed and made to blossom as the rose by means of irrigation canals. The French gave us some beautiful names, also, which still remain as mementoes of the days when France claimed the great Louisiana territory, occupying much of the country lying between the Mississippi river and the Rocky mountains. There's Prairie du Rocher, Qu'appelle, (who calls?) Reviere des Ombres (River of the dark shadows) and many others.

Antiquity is a word the meaning of which varies with location. In Asia it refers to times, cities and deeds of 3000 to 5000 years in the dim past; in Europe to happenings of 3000 years agone or less; in America to the Jamestown and northeastern coast settlements. St. Augustine, Florida, our oldest city, dates back to 1565, only. New York is three centries old this very year, Boston 297 years of age, Philadelphia 287 years and Chicago only a little over 100. In the Pacific coast region, however, the oldest city, San Diego, was founded but 154 years ago, though the site of Santa Barbara was visited by Cabrillo in 1542, and San Francisco by Sir Francis Drake six years later. The largest city, Los Angeles, the original name of which was "La Puebla de Nuestra Senora, la Reina de Los Angeles," meaning "The City of Our Lady, Queen of the Angels," was not founded until 1781 and did not really begin to grow until about forty years ago. While in most Asian countries families have occupied the same houses for untold hundreds of years and in Europe for many generations, in our eastern cities an old resident is one who has lived there 40 or 50 years. In California, however, one who has lived in the same city 12 or 15 years feels quite venerable and if it chances that he hasn't changed locations for 35 or 40 years he is looked upon as a Methusaleh. This is not wonderful when one thinks of the magic changes of the past few years — Glendale increasing from less than 1000 population to more than 40,000 in 23 years, Van Nuys and Lankershim from drifting sand heaps to several thousand inhabitants each in 12 years, and so on.

About 35 years ago there appeared in central Illinois an attraction called a street fair. It was an aggregation of side-show features requiring locations on the city streets, certain of which had to be given over almost wholly to the purpose. Mattoon, a city of about 5000 then, was the first to try out the new craze, which was acclaimed to be a great trade getter. It was, of a certain kind. Many of the tents were mere brothels, where the most shameful orgies were pulled off. Abandoned women of the lowest class were used as lures for men and boys, and infamies were practiced that left their stain for many years. Gambling games of all kinds were played openly and thousands of dollars fleeced from townspeople and visitors alike. The ministers and better class of church people opposed the fair vigorously and sought the aid of the laws to suppress the scandalous indecencies, but the city authorities were so blinded with the notion that these things were necessary to draw trade that they willingly violated their oaths of office and refused to oust the show. Other cities emulated Mattoon's example and the blight swept across the state, into Indiana. But as is usually the case with vile creatures who get up such schemes, they became so brazenly indecent and so reckless in their gambling practices that they disgusted even the "liberal" element that sponsored them and they were refused any further franchises to city streets. I sincerely trust that our own beautiful city may never fall so low as to even consider for a moment such affairs as these. We have had some tent shows where gambling games were conducted more or less openly, and in some of the most flagrant instances such games were suppressed. But in California the gambling craze seems to permeate everywhere—in business, in society and in shows of many kinds, so it is very hard to determine where the line should be drawn. But I do not believe that Glendale officials and Glendale people will ever stand for anything in the show line that is really indecent, though I fear that some of the movie films come perilously near the line in costume, or lack of it, rather. But there is certainly a vast improvement over three or four year ago if newspaper advertisements and billboard showings are any criterion.

Even in the most highly civilized peoples there seems to be a wild, untamed spirit that sometimes breaks out in mobs. Such lawless gatherings are not peculiar to America as some people seem to think nor are they a product of the new democracy called a republic. Nearly 2000 years ago a mob of Jews, composed not of the ignorant common people alone, but of priests and princes as well, demanded the death of the only sinless man who ever lived on this earth, Jesus of Nazareth, and so great was their power that the Roman procurator, representative of the mighty Roman empire, felt himself forced to yield to their demand for the blood of that just man, though he "found no fault in Him." A little more than 100 years previous to this, Spartacus, a gladiator, headed a mob of 60,000 slaves that defied all Rome, defeated two Roman armies sent against it, and for many months terrorized the "Eternal City." About the middle of the 14th century Cola di Rienzi raised a mob in that same city that overthrew the corrupt nobles who had so long misgoverned Rome. He instituted a wise government and for a number of years ruled the city with absolute justice. He finally became tyrannical and unjust, and a mob composed largely of his former followers rose against him and took his life. At about the same period Wat Tyler, an Englishman, raised an immense mob as a protest against unjust taxation, then marched upon and pillaged London. In the height of his triumph he was killed by the mayor of London, and the king, by a bold stroke, won over his mob followers. In 1789 immense mobs of oppressed French men and women formed suddenly, barricaded the streets, and fought desperately against the soldiers of the king. Growing bolder as their power increased they marched against the bastile, that bloodstained, gloomy prison in which since its erection in 1370, French rulers had incarcerated the luckless ones, nobles and commoners, who had offended them, and, on July 14, leveled it to the ground. Then ensued the bloody French revolution, in which thousands were slain. In our own country about the first appearance of the mob spirit was in the days of Salem witchcraft in the 17th century. Mobs were frequent just preceding the Revolutionary war, also, and ever since that time there have been sporadic outbreaks. The bloodiest of these was in New York City, shortly after the battle of Gettysburg, and lasted several days. It was a protest against the enforcement of the draft. Many hundreds of people were killed, chiefly rioters, for it was finally necessary to train cannon upon them and they fell in heaps. How many perished was never known. Closely following the end of the war, mobs of Ku Kluxes were formed in many Southern states to resist invasions of the rights of the planters by unscrupulous agents of the government sent down from the north. These organizations, formed for the defense of people's rights, soon developed into gangs of marauders who flogged and even killed many innocent negroes as well as white persons. They finally were suppressed and many of the murderous members slain. The Ku Klux Klan is again to the fore these days, in many states of the north, south, east and west, and is openly defying the government. But some of the worst and most destructive mobs have been due to labor troubles. In 1877 an outbreak incited by a secret order composed of Irishmen, under the name of Molly Maguires, inaugurated a reign of terror in Pittsburg, Pa. The mobs burned millions of dollars' worth of railroad property and defied state and national officials. Detachments of regulars were finally brought in from the western posts and the murderous rioters were subdued, after many had been killed. Similar scenes were enacted in Chicago in 1894, when the A. R. U. strike, engineered by Eugene Debs, resulted in widespread destruction of railroad property and the loss of several lives. U. S. soldiers were used in this case, also, to put down the rebellion, causing a bitter clash between the anarchist governor of Illinois, Altgeld, and courageous, upright, President Cleveland. The Homestead riots in Pennsylvania were similar and resulted in many casualties on both sides. This same spirit has pervaded our schools and colleges for many years and mobs of cowardly students will set upon the members of another class or upon a single student in many cases, and by brute force overpower and maltreat them or him. Many times these attacks have resulted in murder. Such a case is now being investigated in Chicago. Hazing is a brutal, cowardly "sport," the oppression of one by many and surely no manly boy will ever engage in it. When one man or boy is assailed by a crowd, the spirit of fair play, on which we pride ourselves, vanishes. More than one man or boy, too cowardly to avenge his own wrongs, real or fancied, takes advantage of the mob spirit to overpower his enemy. This same mob spirit is a dire menace to our free institutions. If anything on earth can convince us of this, certainly the treasonable actions of I. W. W. mobs all over the country should be a warning. These and their socialist and communist abettors have gained control of some large cities and very nearly of one or two states. And it is the spirit of mob rule that dictates all their efforts.

Every public utterance of our president shows the true greatness of the man. His Decoration Day address at Arlington cemetery should be read and studied by every citizen. It marks a long stride in the direction of universal peace, for which all Christians are praying.

Wicked old Chicago threatens to outlaw prize fights, because of a particularly bloody contest there on Decoration Day. What a shameful desecration of a sacred day? It seems that some of the sordid spectators engaged in a free fight after the paid combat. Prize fighting is brutal and degrading. Few persons with any claims to decency and respectability attend them and most of the contenders are of a very low class. It is hard to conceive of a real man or woman taking pleasure in seeing two brutes engaged in battering and bruising each other for money.

CLINT BOOTH TO MOVE OFFICES TO 116 W. COLORADO

Clinton L. Booth, the popular insurance man, will move today to his new location at 116 and 120 West Colorado, where he will have much larger and better quarters to accommodate his growing business. He will have the same telephone number—Glendale 1465—and Col. La None will be in charge as usual.

Mr. Booth and wife will leave in a few days for Dickson, Ill., where they will spend a month or more visiting the old home and looking after business interests. They have not been back east for sometime, and will thoroughly enjoy their visit.

Mr. Booth's insurance business is growing right along, and the fact that he handles automobile insurance exclusively and personally settles all claims has made it possible for him to develop a wonderful business, which he says, increases every month.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF EAGLE ROCK CITY

EIGHT FAMILIES PICNIC AT LA CRESCENTA

Picnic Space Is Reserved for Eagle Rock People Next Sunday

Eight Eagle Rock families spent the holiday at Briggs' Terrace tract. near La Crescenta, where they are purchasing ground for a community lodge. A slight rain fell, but did not dampen the spirits of the party, every member of which enjoyed a riotous good time. Picnic lunches were served under the trees, and so enjoyable did the occasion prove that the same group, augmented by a number of other Eagle Rock families who are interested in joining on the purchase of the property and the erection of the club house, will spend Sunday on the same site. Any Eagle Rock people who wish to look over the property and consider joining the club are asked to meet at the big barn which serves as a community center on the Terrace tract, two miles north of La Crescenta. Picnic space will be reserved for them.

The following families enjoyed the picnic frolic on Memorial day: W. A. Quarterman, J. B. Squire, W. H. Dorrance, G. T. Peabody, R. W. Hough, E. D. Koen, Edith Parker, F. H. Lerchin.

EAGLE ROCK URGED TO TAKE PART IN ELECTION

Educational Board Election Will Be of Especial Interest

A special urge is issued by the school authorities for Eagle Rock residents to take part in the Los Angeles election on June 5, and pay special heed to the school question. It is essential that the proper persons be put upon the board of education for the coming term, and members of the local school faculties ask that everyone eligible be out to vote on the fifth. There are two tickets for the board of education candidates, one of these called the "Citizens' School Committee," with which most of the elementary teachers are allied, and the other the "Teachers' League," which has a following of high school instructors.

The recruits were lined up for inspection, when the orderly officer observed with amazement that one of the privates was minus his hat and coat.

"Where's the rest of your uniform?" he demanded.

"In the barrack room, sir," replied the rookie.

"Then go and get properly dressed at once," was the stern command.

The man dashed off, and a few moments later returned with his coat on but still without his hat.

"Where's your hat?" roared the officer.

Back went the man, and soon appeared again with hat and coat complete. The officer looked at him for a minute. Then:

"What have you done with your rifle?" he bellowed.

"Left it in the barrack-room, sir," was the answer.

"Good heavens!" shouted the other. "You're a fine soldier. What were you before you joined up?"

"Plumber's helper, sir."

Mrs. E. Lowry Fischer Will Open Studio Here

Mrs. E. Lowry Fischer has purchased an attractive home on the corner of Stanley and Glen Eyrie avenue, and will open her new studio there early in June. Mrs. Fischer, who has come into prominence here through her splendid direction of the community play production, has carried on the majority of her studio work in Pasadena, where she has a wide circle of friends and many talented pupils. She will now devote more time to training the many young people in Eagle Rock who have an interest in educationary or dramatic pursuits.

PRECAUTIONS FOR CLEAN UP WEEK

The following suggestion have been advanced for observance during "Clean-up Week:"

If there is grass growing about your fence or house, it should be cut away for a space of four to six feet to provide a fire break. This same precaution should be taken with trees. If there are a number of trees closely planted it would be far better to cut the grass and pile it in an open space for burning.

If there is any burnable rubbish in close proximity to a structure of any kind, or a fence, it should be moved into the center of a vacant lot to be burned only by consent of the fire department.

Each home should have at least two water-soaked gunny sacks to be used in case a grass fire should start close by.

Keep all available garden hose attached to the hydrant at all times.

If a fire should be sweeping toward your property and you have the necessary fire break provided, then you should back-fire by starting a fire along your own property line.

The hours for burning rubbish are from 6 to 9 a. m., and then only in an incinerator. This you do not need a permit for.

The hours for burning grass are from 6 a. m. to 3 p. m. in Eagle Rock City only, and then only by express permission of the fire department.

Don't dump rubbish into a small area surrounded by grass and set fire to it. The authorities may see fit to prosecute such persons who are responsible for damages under these conditions for contributory negligence.

Don't spend any time worrying over the ownership of a piece of property that is overgrown with grass. The thing to do is to eliminate it as a fire hazard. This is the "homeland" way of doing things.

Don't wait to find the telephone number when you wish to report a fire. Merely tell the operator that you want the fire department, and when connection is made, clearly tell the persons you are speaking to the location of the fire. If you give the location as two intersecting streets, go promptly to that spot and wait the coming of the fire department.

To curl ostrich feathers shake the tip vigorously through the steam escaping from the spout of a kettle, being careful that the feather does not get too damp. Then curl carefully with a silver fruit knife. Shake or comb the feather afterward to remove the stiff appearance.

White furniture may be cleaned by dissolving baking soda in warm water and applying the solution to the furniture with a soft cloth, rubbing with a dry one afterward. Finger marks and dirt are easily removed in this simple way. A teaspoon to a pint of water.

SMART CAPES

New and very smart are capes and wrap-around coats of brown moire with collars of brown fur.

NO TUITION FOR SUMMER SCHOOL THIS YEAR

150 Pupils Expected to Take Advantage of Special Session

There will be no tuition charged for attending the Eagle Rock summer school. This will insure a much larger attendance than usual, as an entrance fee of $15 has been customary in former years.

The session will run at the Central school from July 9 until August 17, and at least five or six teachers will be employed to instruct the various classes in reading, arithmetic, spelling, history geography, English and music. Children of all ages are eligible, and applications are being filed in the superintendent's office now. One-half a year of work can be made up during this term. Classes will be in session from 8 until 12 o'clock only.

This school will not only meet the needs of those who for reasons of absence or difficulty in learning are behind in their studies, and it will also put those ahead who because of their age, or special ability to learn, wish to make up half a grade. Superintendent Harwood states that he hopes for an attendance of 150 pupils.

SUBTERRANEAN FOREST FOUND

[By Associated Press]

SANTA ANA, Calif., June 1.—Fragments of what geologists say may be a vast petrified forest have been uncovered near here by workmen constructing the new Skyline drive, a scenic mountain highway.

All along the new road for a distance of about a mile, the upper embankment shows what at first appears to be iron stains stretching both vertically and horizontally. A few strokes of the pick bring the surrounding soil crumbling down, however, and the "stains" are left projecting from the mountain side, unmistakable tree trunks of rock.

Sections of trunks from a foot to two and one-half feet in diameter have been found above and below the roadway. Bark and stria on these fragments indicate that the ancient forest of which they were a part contained firs and oaks, while some petrifications of a coarser soft wood have also been found.

In one place a pile of old gnarls or knots was found, some of the specimens being as large in diameter as an ordinary tree.

Scientists who have inspected the spot say that the prehistoric forest probably extended straight across what formerly was a plateau now buried beneath a mountain range.

Ages ago, according to their theory, the forest was submerged, swallowed by the sea in some huge cataclysm, and in subsequent upheavals lifted high above the waters as part of the mountain range which now conceals it. If the top of the mountain could be lifted, they assert, a dense woodland of petrified trees would be revealed in skeletonic grandeur, rising from a wide plateau.

A closer study of the newly-discovered fragments and of the territory believed to have been the site of the prehitsoric forest is being planned by a number of local geologists.

BATTLE OVER LANGUAGE ACT

[By Associated Press]

HONOLULU, T. H., June 1.—Another legal battle over the alien language schools in the territory looms up in connection with the attempts of territorial officials to make effective the Clark act, passed by the recent session of the legislature, according to statements made by counsel for several Japanese language schools. The Japanese schools initiated legislation against regulations promulgated by the school board on the authority of previous legislation.

Eight Japanese language schools on this island have closed their doors on the advice of counsel, pending a decision as to whether suit is to be brought against the validity of the Clark act. Thirty-three alien language schools apparently have accepted the validity of the act by applying for the licenses required by the law. This group consists of 23 Japanese, five Chinese, four Korean and one Russian school.

The Clark act provides that all licenses issued heretofore for alien schools are cancelled and that applications must be made for new permits. It also assesses an annual fee of $1 upon each pupil at the alien school to raise funds for defraying the expenses of inspecting and supervising the institutions; it provides for the examination and licensing of teachers in the schools, and for the gradual abolition of the first and second grades of the foreign language courses.

Objection to the act is made by the eight schools on the contention that it is unconstitutional and discriminatory.

The question of the foreign language institutions will be investigated thoroughly by a select committee of legislators which was appointed at the close of the recent session to recommend legislation for consideration by the 1925 legislature, according to a statement by committee members.

The action of this committee will be guided by the manner in which the alien schools are conducted in the next two years, according to one legislator.

"If these schools act in good faith there probably will be no changes recommended in the existing law two years hence; but, if they do not act in good faith and if they show themselves inclined to oppose Hawaii's very vital and important Americanization program, it is highly probable that the legislature will take steps toward closing them entirely," according to the statement by Representative Emil Muller, a member of the select committee, and chairman of the education committee of the house of representatives.

WESTERN YELLOW PINE SUBJECT OF BULLETIN

"Because of the abundance and great economic importance of western yellow pine the difficulties attending its natural regeneration present the most vital silvicultural problem in the Southwest," declares the forest service United States Department of Agriculture, in Department Bulletin 1105, "Natural Reproduction of Western Yellow Pine in the Southwest," just issued.

The bulletin, of which G. A. Pearson of the forest service is the author, discusses with great thoroughness the factors influencing the reproduction of western yellow pine, including seed supply, climate, soil, herbaceous vegetation, cutting, brush disposal, grazing, and destructive agencies.

The Department of Agriculture has a limited supply of these bulletins which will be sent free upon request as long as the supply lasts, after which the bulletin may be secured from the superintendent of documents, government printing office, Washington, D. C., for 30 cents per copy.

The main purpose of the study upon which the bulletin is based was to determine what measures are necessary to secure natural reproduction of western yellow pine. In the forests of Arizona and New Mexico slow growth and high costs as a general rule, render artificial reforestation impractical; therefore restocking must be accomplished by natural means.

The series of experiments conducted by Mr. Pearson and his associates at the Fort Valley (Arizona) Forest Experiment Station of the forest service were begun in 1908. Because the problem of reproduction is particularly acute on the Coconino and Tusayan National Forests in northern Arizona, the investigations were concentrated there.

Were a man's sorrows and disquietudes summed up at the end of his life, it would generally be found that he had suffered more from the apprehension of such evils as never happened to him, than from those evils which had really befallen him.—Addison.

ABOLISHING SHAKESPEARE

Apparently Shakespeare is destined to be classed at last among the myths. There have been many attempts to prove that no man of that name ever wrote the plays and poems attributed to him. A common course has been to give to Bacon credit for their authorship. Bacon was a learned man. According to the experience and training of Shakespeare as ordinarily set forth in biography, the latter could have been a learned man only as direct result of a miracle. He must have had a knowledge greater than ever packed into another human head. So far as known he had had no opportunity to acquire this knowledge; he simply had it as a natural endowment. So great were the gifts bestowed upon "the immortal bard" that a lecturer on Shakespeare once characterized him as the intellectual monster of the age. So truly he might be called if accepted as an individual. Regarding the work as resulting from the combined efforts of the best minds of the times, to a certain extent the mystery vanishes. There were abundant reasons in the days of Elizabeth why a writer might have desired his identity concealed.

There were mighty men of letters in the day of Bacon, Peele and Ben Johnson. They did not have the freedom of expression that prevails now. Doubtless they felt the impulse to say many things that could not with safety have been said by them. But to say these things and shift the responsibility to an actor, whose profession was without respectable standing anyhow, could be imagined as a policy of caution.

The world has come to the conclusion that the obscure actor did not write the plays. Upon reflection it decides that no one individual could have written them all. Therefore the Shakespearian output is coming to be regarded as a composite, the work of many. Authorship not having been declared at the time, the decision must be left now to conjecture.

Mystery concerning literature is not rare. Where Homer lived or where he died are equally matters of dispute. Sometimes the Homeric works are regarded as an accumulation, the wisdom of centuries gathered from unidentified sources and compiled by scribes unknown.

FOR GOOD ROADS

Residents of California are aware that the excellence of the roads in this state have an economic value that hardly could be estimated. Just how much the presence of these roads in southern California has done towards promoting industries and inducing population, there is no precise way of determining. When it is possible to get in an automobile anywhere in this community in the morning, and to ride all day in any of a dozen directions, without once finding a bad bit of going, the importance of the roads is evident. They have opened new territory, and brought the territory into easy touch with the market. They have lured travelers from afar, to wander among the beauties that in olden days of unpaved roads and horse-drawn vehicles would have been inaccessible.

The people in a state where the automobiles are above the million in number are willing to pay for roads for the machines to run on. All they ask is that they shall have roads constructed according to specifications and at a fair price. They do not grumble at being called upon to pay their share of the expense. There being far more machines in the south than at the north, it is natural to assume that expenditures will be governed somewhat by this fact. In January there will begin to be a two-cent tax on gasoline. Consumers are not grumbling, for they understand the purpose of the tax is the betterment of the roads they use.

With the money available, and to be available, it is believed that California will maintain the distinction of having more first-class highways than any other state in the union, which considering its vast expanse, its increasing supply of machines, and its all-the-year-climate for automobiling, is as it should be.

SUPPRESSING CRIME

There is a valiant effort to eliminate the traffic in illicit drugs. Quite needless to recount again the horrors of this traffic. An organized fight is being made upon it, the movement involving many nations and support from all over the world. It is possible that the result will be beneficent and widespread. Doubtless this will be the effect if the drug addict is regarded as the visible sign of a great iniquity. It is true that for safety the drug addict must be restrained, and the small-fry dope vendor placed in jail. Both of these types are mere symptoms of disease. If the evil may not be traced to its source, and the supply cut off there, it must still remain an evil. Segregation of its victims and of its agents would be followed by a new crop of each, provided the supply of drugs continued. In other words, it becomes necessary to reiterate the familiar statement that it is the man higher up who must be seized and punished. He is the instigator of the traffic. He is the arch offender. He it is who receives the greatest profits of the nefarious business. The peddlers are merely his instruments.

The law that prescribes heavy penitentiary sentences for having illegal possession of drugs is just and necessary. The effectiveness would be taken out of it were the real heads of the traffic, the men who supply the capital and produce the noxious stuff, to remain immune and feel secure. They have no thought as to the fate of their victims, but so long as permitted to continue operations unhampered, always may be certain of a fresh set of victims.

Two children were killed recently near Riverside when an automobile in which they were riding was overturned on the road. There were other children in the car. One seems to have reached the maturity of sixteen. The two who died were aged respectively, fourteen and fifteen. The boy who was driving was twelve years old. He says that one of the children in the rear seat had thrown her arms about his neck, pulling him backwards and causing him to lose control. Be that as it may, no boy of twelve years should be permitted to drive a car on the public highway, nor to drive it at all except under the eye and direction of a competent adult. In case of sudden emergency no lad of such tender years could be expected to have either the necessary strength or judgment.

As said many times, most automobile accidents could have been avoided by reasonable care. Due to unforeseen conditions, some accidents are inevitable. People ought to have learned by this time not to invite disaster. The drunk driver, the hog who disregards rules and signals, the stupid one who strives to beat a train over a crossing, are recognized as evils, and too generally accepted as necessary evils. The public is forced to take chances with them, sometimes escaping. It is impossible to put brains into a solid ivory dome, and therefore impossible to abolish these objectionable types. There is no reason, however, why a child of twelve should be permitted to drive. Parental authority ought to be able to prevent that even if police authority failed.

And many a man goes up in the air who doesn't know an airplane from a go-cart.

Woman might have had her rights long ago had she understood the manly art of grafting.

Meeting Issues Intelligently

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

While we are introducing all kinds of irrelevent courses into the public schools, wouldn't it be glorious if some genius introduced a course devised to teach people to meet issues intelligently?

The world is vocal with lamentations and the burden of them is "I can't," "I don't know what to do," "What's going to become of me?" "Who will show me how?" and more to the same effect.

This morning I picked up a paper and read:

"Complained of snoring. Granted divorce."

Fancy the type of mentality that is unable to solve such a domestic problem without resort to the divorce courts. If one of a married pair snores, why can't they sleep in different beds? Why can't the one annoyed stop his ears with cotton? What is to prevent the pair occupying separate rooms?

Such adjustments are easy enough.

But people prefer divorce to parting with prejudices or fancied rights.

In America in certain bourgeoise circles husbands hold the conviction that they are humiliated if their wives occupy separate beds; while the suggestion of separate rooms sends them into spasms of horror.

Or perhaps the adjustment is prevented by a man's false sense of economy. Why should he pay good money when all his wife has to do to make him happy is to stop snoring?

And as to the cotton, that suggestion raises a wall of resentment. Why, will you please tell me, should I wear cotton in my ears when it is you who snore?

The same helpless psychology runs through human relations as we see them. One couple comes to the parting of the ways because the man has an idea that it is "sissy" to wear a collar; divorce is preferable to a surrender of the feeling of independence of which a shirt open at the neck is the symbol.

Among my acquaintances is a young couple who separated because the girl had been bred to the belief that cooking was menial. Her husband was unable to hire a cook and she took the matter of having the work to do as an affront. Her mother foolishly called her home and she procured a divorce.

Then there is a family in a nearby small town that is being wrecked on a prejudice of the wife. This lady has a mother who is moro than ordinarily silly and her impossible, and her banal babble is driving her daughter and her husband to distraction. The old woman wants to live elsewhere; her daughter wishes to be free of her and the son-in-law prays daily that she will depart from the shadow of his roof. Since all three hold the same desires why is the adjustment not made? Because of the wife's inability to live contrary to tradition, which says she should keep her mother in her home. Under all circumstances the keeping is destructive to happiness and inane, still the situation continues for want of adjustment.

The list of examples could be extended indefinitely, but those I have given sufficiently illustrate the point. We need knowledge of how to adjust and we need the courage and dignity to carry out adjustments when indicated.

When and where will we get them?

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

QUERIES

"Inherent In"

B. H. Foster, New York: "Is in or to correct in the following sentence: '. . . taxes which are specifically provided for as inherent (in or to?) the petroleum industry . . .'?"

Answer: If inherent were the right word in the foregoing sentence, in would be its proper companion. But can taxes be inherent in anything, except possibly in the operation of a government?

"Basically"

O. M. Jordan, Waukegan, Ill.: "Kindly advise me if the word basic has for its adverb basically, and if the latter form is good English. Several dictionaries have failed to supply this information, but I have seen it in print so many times that I am led to believe it is a correct English word . . ."

Answer: "Basically appears in no dictionary. Mr. Jordan and other readers of "The Right Word" are given the opportunity to contribute samples of its correct use.

Yesterday's Error

Wrong: "We should like to know whether you can say . . ."

Right: We should like to know whether you may say . . .

Wrong: ". . . Of Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith, the former has the most ability?"

Right: Of Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith, the former is the abler.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

Blessed is the man who earns his way.
And the woman who earns her way.
For that is the design of a social order that will survive.

JAMES W. FOLEY

To earn your way.
And everybody should earn his way unless he is physically or mentally unfit.

* * *

There is no right place in the world for parasites.
For the lazy, the incompetent, the indolent, the careless, the useless.
Be careful that you become none of these.
Earn your way.

* * *

It is the self respecting thing to do.
It makes for strength.
For character.
For stout fibre.
For competence.
For all the things that make life worth the living.

* * *

It matters not how you earn it, if it be by any useful and wholesome endeavor.
It may be by using a pick and shovel.
By driving nails.
By any one of the utilitarian trades.
By any one of the professions.
By hewing and hauling and digging and fetching and carrying.
By doing any task of which the world has need.
But earn your way.

It is not necessary that you labor with pick and shovel.
You may labor with your brains.
You may sing or play or make good fun.
You may be a blacksmith or a mechanic or a baseball player or a doctor or a preacher.
But earn your way.

* * *

Shun gifts.
Beware of ease.
Don't overplay.
Take nothing for nothing if you are able to earn it and pay for it.
Make it a rule to return value for value.
Value in money or in goods or in labor.

* * *

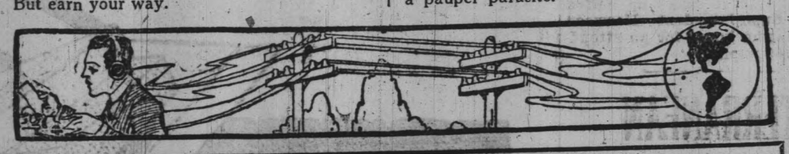
But, however it may be, earn your way.
Walk rather than steal a ride.
Work rather than shirk.
Do more and rue less.
Get the habit of work.
And the habit of giving value for value.

* * *

Don't be any kind of a beggar as long as you are able to walk a block, lift a hammer, run an errand, rake a lawn or sweep a sidewalk.
All useful labor is honorable.
All wilful idleness is dishonorable.
For you are asking some one to carry you through the world on his back.

* * *

No inheritance can give you an honest living unless you work.
No ancestor can put you through the world with credit and honor by leaving you money if you live in idleness and uselessness.
You can be a millionaire parasite as well as a pauper parasite.



Songs of the Poets

Song—By Irene Rutherford McLeod

How do I love you?
I do not know.
Only because of you
Gladly I go.

Only because of you
Labor is sweet,
And all the song of you
Sings in my feet.

Only the thought of you
Trembles and lies
Just where the world begins—
Under my eyes.

INFIDELITY TO EVOLUTION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

INFIDELITY toward evolution is rather a serious matter.

It is not particularly serious if one does not believe the tenets of this creed or that, or the teachings of this church or not, because there are other creeds and other churches to which one may turn if he likes.

But infidelity toward evolution is another matter. For evolution is a clear, plain, and established law. Disbelief in it is like disbelief in gravitation, or electricity, or any established chemical formula which has been working for years.

We know that evolution is a fact the same way we know that any other law of nature is a fact. Because it works.

We believe in evolution for the same reason that we believe in God; that is, because the attempt to conduct our lives without this belief results in confusion and error.

Evolution is not something that has merely to do with man's descending from the monkeys. It is not a matter solely of the past. It is a law that is working right now, and a law that contains the only possible promise for the future.

It means that the present is a growth from the past, and the future will be a growth from the present.

It also means that anybody that expects to get anything permanent in the way of results from life must attend to growing that thing.

Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History, recently said:

"Evolution takes its place with the gravitation law of Newton. It should be taught in our schools simply as nature speaks to us about it, and entirely separated from the opinions, materialistic or theistic, which have clustered about it. This simple, direct teaching of Nature is full of moral and spiritual force, if we keep the element of human opinion out of it. The moral principle inherent in evolution is that nothing can be gained in this world without an effort; the ethical principle inherent in evolution is that the best only has the right to survive; the spiritual principle in evolution is the evidence of beauty, of order, and of design in the daily myriad of miracles to which we our existence."

This is strong, but it is not strong enough. It because people do not take evolution into account that they make so many fatuous plans for reforming the world, and are so bitterly disappointed when these plans do not pan out.

This earth is a garden, and everything alive upon it, including human souls, must be grown if we want any crop.

There has been too much tinkering and not enough growing done in the world.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

RATS AT THE FOUNTAINS

[Chicago Tribune]

The significance of the Hearst attack upon Chief Justice Taft should be fully understood by the American public.

If it were an attack upon Mr. Taft as an individual, it would be unjust and condemnable, but it is more, much more than that. Mr. Hearst has bestowed his abuse upon many of the great Americans of our day, such as McKinley, Roosevelt, Root, Hughes, and his attack has always taken the form of a virtual accusation of corruption. It is always the same story at bottom; the object of Hearst's hostility is held up as a subservient agent of what in the Hearst jargon is called "the interests." They are betraying the people for a price and Hearst is exposing them. The alleged exposures are the usual gas cloud of innuendo, suggestion, perversion of facts and sophistical argument. * * *

Take the latest case, that of the attack upon the chief justice. The end and object of that attack is to shake the confidence of the American people not merely in an individual but in an institution. It is the supreme court that Hearst is after, and every American of intelligence and devotion to the American system of government would better grasp that fact.

It is worth while noting the favor of the Hearst policy for the bloody handed and destructive regime which has cursed unhappy Russia for over four years. That is a consistent attitude, for the soul and center of Hearst's propaganda is the attack upon the institution of private property. By perpetually harping upon inequalities of wealth, by perpetually distorting the facts of business success, by persistent use of sophistries, half truths, and suggestions of fraud, and betrayal of trust, the Hearst propaganda is at work night and day to undermine the confidence of Americans not only in their representatives, their principals, and their institutions, but in one another as decent, honorable fellow beings. Any man who has built a success, who has acquired more wealth or higher position than the average, comes within the range of this gas cloud; any enterprise which is successful on a large scale comes within the sweep of its poisonous influence.

American institutions ought to be out of the reach of defacement or destruction by demagogues, but we cannot assert they are. American harmony and progress ought to be beyond their reach, but they are not. If our birthright is worth keeping, it must be defended and especially from such enemies as seek to discredit every accomplishment and to poison men's hearts and minds against one another.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

HENRY JAMES

It is rather pitiful to see a man possessing the mentality that has characterized the work of Conan Doyle, losing his grip in his riper years and being bamboozled by fakers. Doyle should now be at his intellectual best. Something appears to have gone awry with his mechanism of thought. As he approaches the medium his attitude is precisely that of the yokel tackling the shell and pea game.

The tricks that have convinced Doyle of the veracity of the managing engineers of the darkened cabinet, have been duplicated times without number by prestidigitators who advanced no claim of ability to do anything but deceive the senses. The "spirit" photographs are meaningless, since they may be produced by any person skilled in the use of the camera.

It hardly is fair to denounce all so-called mediums as deliberate frauds. Most of them are ignorant, easily influenced, and have been fooled themselves. They are able to bring about certain manifestations that they cannot explain. Therefore they place the responsibility on the spirits; and a silly lot of spirits at that.

There is a mysterious and wholly invisible force, akin in the hidden character of its methods to electricity. This force it is possible to generate so that it will tip tables or cause raps, or do other wholly useless stunts. The force doubtless, is an influence of mind, and in an inexplicable fashion, it operates to cause agitation of inert material.

The professional medium, however, resorts to trickery, as more nearly certain. Exposures have been numerous and complete. Nevertheless Mr. Doyle, with the simple faith as of a child, swallows bait, line and sinker and asks for more.

Such an ordinance rigidly enforced would end the popularity of the surf. Of course the real swimmer does not desire to go in weighted down with cumbersome togs even though these proclaim a perfect virtue. Then the poseur whose pulchritude adds much to the charms of the beach, would have no purpose in posing, and would go away. Which would be regretted by the wicked majority.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Another crop of graduates is in sight. Pretty soon the boys and girls who have been trotting to school with books under their arms will be entering that post-graduate course the world offers. We may laugh at them a little bit, now and then, affectionately, but we must admit the truth. Each crop speeds the old world up a little. Each gives to the world a little bit more than it gets.

Our town has a tremendous capacity of absorption. Each year some hundreds of graduates are turned loose in it and disappear. Not many, as it seems to me, go away from home. Most of them find places right here, where they are best known, and where the old folks can smooth the way for them. Not one youngster in ten—twenty maybe—leaves town in the first few years.

It's a mighty good thing for the town. During those first years, when they are getting their feet on the gravel, they do not get much out of life, perhaps. Plenty of fun, of course, and new girls and new beaux and new dresses and new clothes. By and by new cars for some of them. But for the most part they seem to melt into the scenery. They are here and yet they are unremarked. Not many of them make salaries that more than pay expenses. Perhaps they are not worth much to their employers.

But they are to the town. The most frightful place I can imagine would be a town from which the year's crop of graduates go away as soon as the diplomas have been rolled and wrapped. The rest of us would begin to go, right on the heels of the graduates. Or all the rest of us who had money enough to go with. Those who were left would be the dull, morbid, sullen sediment at the bottom of the bottle. All the life and effervescence and sparkle would be gone. The town would be dull as ditchwater. And as deadly.

The only men who make the town worth living in now, to tell the truth, are those who were graduates just the other day.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF BURBANK AND ITS ENVIRONS

BURBANK CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WILL MAIL OUT BOOKLET SOON TO PEOPLE IN EVERY STATE

Pamphlet Tells of Details Which Business Interests Would Want to Know Before Settling In a Town

The Burbank chamber of commerce is putting out an elaborate pamphlet with many views of the town, its early history, population and description of everything about the town which a new citizen would like to know. The booklet will be mailed to a list of people which has been contributed by Burbank residents.

The foreword to the book written by Mr. Colburn is as follows:

It has been said many times, and truthfully, that cities come into being where natural environment is most inviting. In fact, nature must make the first offering of some visible, though latent, resource to some hardy pioneer, and the community, and then the city, is merely the result of the development of this resource.

Ofttimes this may be a safe landing place on an otherwise rugged seacoast; or near a safe and easy ford across an otherwise turbulent stream; or at the crossing point of two trails or well traveled roadways; or it may be on a mesa or in a valley of some mountain country with its nearby bubbling spring or other water supply.

Cities are builded where the caravans of trade or pleasure find the allurements of nature more attractive and the development of resources more profitable than the call of the onward march. There may be mountains of precious metal or the basic supplies of commerce, but if nature has not provided these conditions which are condusive to the health, happiness and prosperity of the populace, the place does not long survive and is soon deserted and forgotten and a city never comes into being.

In the creation of the site of the present city of Burbank and contiguous territory, nature was lavish in her bestowal of the charms that atrract and hold. The beauty of the foothill and valley was apparent even to Jose Maria Verdugo, the first owner.

The story goes that after riding over the miles and miles of his new possession and after seeking for weeks the ideal spot upon which he might establish the family shrine, Jose Maria Verdugo arrived at a point which is but a few hundred yards from the present city limits of Burbank. The time is said to have been late in the afternoon. He was dressed in the striking costume of the Spanish soldier. His mount was a noble black, the pick of his vast herd. With folded arms, his wide sombrero resting jauntily upon his head, he searched with critical eye the panorama of the beautiful valley spread out before his vision. His eyes brightened and a smile of utter satisfaction indented the olive cheeks. There was nothing to compare and the choice was quickly made. Here was the full realization of his dreams of a home, and it was here that the site was chosen. Here was everything he had sought. This was the end of his quest at the end of a perfect day.

Burbank and the San Fernando valley as seen from Burbank, is as beautiful today as it appeared to Jose Maria Verdugo on that eventful afternoon. The air is as clear, and the valley and foothills are as wondrous. The sunsets and the afterglow are as fascinating as then. These are nature's gifts which have combined in making a city.

Burbank has developed into an industrial center by the hand of man. Nature has provided the sunshine and the valley and the mountains which have brought health, wealth and domestic contentment so necessary in the building and the perpetuation of a city in the ultimate.

Some people are always optimists.

"Beanborough," said one of his friends, "always looks on the bright side of things."

"Why?"

"Well, the other day I went with him to buy a pair of shoes. He didn't try them on and when he got hom he found that a nail was sticking right up through the heel of one."

"Did he take them back?"

"No. He said he supposed the nail was put there intentionally to keep the foot from sliding forward in the shoe."

STORMY DAYS FOR COPS UNTIL ROAD IS COMPLETED

Auto Drivers Object to Making Detour

"Tell your troubles to a policeman," is the song Burbank auto drivers are singing now, for everybody that drives a car on West Fernando boulevard apparently feels it a personal affair when they are asked to detour because of the road improvements going on on the boulevard.

Sob stories fail to move the contractor, who has promised to put in about two miles of good roads. In order to do so he has to keep people away, and though they all say they will be glad to see the new good road, very few have expressed themselves as enthusiastic about the detour road. There has been a great deal of complaint for drivers have become wrathful because the road is different.

The police who have been ordered to direct the traffic will have about two more weeks of stormy days, for the contractor does not think the work will be completed until that time.

And thereafter, to-wit: On the 28th day of May, 1923, awarded the contract for said work to the lowest regular responsible bidder, to-wit: E. L. Fleming, at the prices specified for said improvement in his proposal on file for said improvement, to-wit:

And that said award has been approved by the Mayor of the said City of Glendale.

NEW RECRUITS ADDED TO CO. I ENROLLMENT

Men Enlist as Summer Camping Time Draws Near

Company I will go to Eagle Rock Sunday for the last target practice ever to be held there. All future practices are to be held at Griffith park.

New recruits are being added to the company especially as the time draws nearer for the summer camping trip to Gigling Reservation and the young men hear of the plans.

The company will leave Burbank July 8 and will stay until July 23. The last Guardsman has pointed out some special features for the camp. The features include a wrestling ring, a boxing ring, a movie screen and an outdoor stage and three baseball diamonds. There will be a club room for each regiment.

Four afternoons a week will be devoted to target practice and the other afternoons to athletics. There will be parades and joint reviews for all units every night. Twenty-five trophies and 200 individual prizes are contemplated for the winners of the events.

TO BE HONORED GUEST AT PARTY AT CLUBHOUSE

Miss Ruth Spafford and Miss Gibbs to Entertain

Miss Bernice Griffith of Emporia, Kansas will arrive in the city Saturday noon to spend the summer at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Estella B. Ervin and her cousin, Dr. V. P. Ervin.

Miss Griffith will be the guest of honor Saturday evening at a novel Chinese party to be given by Miss Ruth Spafford of Glendale and Miss Thelma Gibbs, Burbank, at the Burbank Women's club rooms.

About 60 guests will be invited. Bunco will be the diversion of the evening.

Kate, the cook, had an inherent distrust of mankind in general and of banks in particular. Being of a frugal nature, she saved a certain proportion of her wages every week and stored it up under her mattress.

For some time she had been "walking out" with the gardener, and so her mistress was not surprised to hear one day that she was going to marry him.

"I want to ask you, mum," said Kate, "the best way to put my money into the bank."

"Put your money in the mank!" exclaimed the lady in astonishment. "Why, Kate, I thought you did not believe in banks?"

"Ah, that's all right, mum, that's all right," replied the cook. "But you know I'm going to get married next week, and I think the money would be safer in the bank than in the house with a strange man about."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK—

By E. R. WAITE
Secretary Shawnee, Oklahoma Chamber of Commerce

THAT some cities are great retail, jobbing and manufacturing centers.

THAT some of them could become greater if the business men made an organized effort to make them so.

THAT in many of them, heads of concerns sit peacefully at their desks waiting for business.

THAT in these competitive times you have to go after it, if you don't some other fellow will get it.

THAT some cities get a certain amount of business because they can't help it.

THAT some of them are so located that a certain amount of business just naturally floats in.

THAT it takes more business to make a business grow. It takes more business to make your city grow. Keep Your City Growing.

BURBANK POET'S SONG IS SUNG OVER RADIO

Times Broadcasts Poem of Captain F. C. Tillson

The following poem of Frank C. Tillson, set to music, was chosen by the Times radio station to be sung at their Wednesday night concert:

DUMB

Little songs of little folks,
I sang before you came,
Of little loves and little hates,
And little dreams of fame.

Today, I know the heights and depths
Of love and suffering,
And, dumb before the scornful Gods,
I feel—but cannot sing.

AN EMPIRE IN THE MAKING

The California Development association has written an article which every California resident will appreciate, according to R. W. Colburn, secretary of the chamber of commerce, and which he has asked the Daily Press to print. It follows:

AN EMPIRE IN THE MAKING

Like a great drama of human achievement, California has been unfolding the story of her progress. First it was the prologue of pioneer days—the days when California's message of the discovery of gold thrilled the entire world and recruited brave hearts from many lands. Then came the epic of the wheat. More recently it has been that of the golden fruit.

Now the curtain is raising on the grand ensemble, in which mining, agriculture, horticulture, industry and commerce are raising their voices in one great pageant. It is a hymn of joy dedicated to the empire of the Pacific now in the making.

No one who sees, hears or feels can doubt but what California today is passing across the threshhold into an era of greatness such as the west has not yet known. Whoever goes abroad through the state's fertile valleys or journeys to her prosperous cities feels this quickened pulse of prosperity and progress.

It is the reward of unity of purpose, co-ordination of effort, and cooperation that means the north and the south reaching out a helping hand to each other, the dropping of petty rivalries between sections, communities and groups.

Just as charity begins at home so does cooperation. If a community does not cooperate within its own groups, it can hardly expect to work in harmony and helpfulness with its sister communities. Our chamber of commerce is the established and tested medium for the expression of this co-ordinated effort. If you are in business, if you own property, you are vitally interested in the progress of your community and should exercise the full prerogatives of active citizenship.

Join your chamber of commerce and you will become a full-fledged partner in the greatest period of development that this section and California as a whole have experienced.

BURBANK BUILDING PERMITS FOR MAY FAR SURPASSES ANY MONTH'S RECORD IN HISTORY OF TOWN

Score for Last Day Adds Twenty Thousand to Sum Total Making a Complete Amount of More Than Three Thousand

Through an error in transmission over the telephone the Burbank building permits for May was misquoted. The very grand and glorious total achieved for the month was $318,750. On the last day of the month the following people asked Building Inspector Elmer Dale for permits, bringing the sum to a point which surpasses any month ever recorded in the history of Burbank. Permits were issued to: Mrs. Richard Day, jr., 706 East Tenth street, $4000; Cora Nelson, $1000; Urania Fairburn, $1200; Clay Beckner, $12,000; Mrs. Julius Sacksteader, $250; Guy Byrd, $900; total, $19,350.

The largest permit for the entire month was that of Ray Sence for $65,000, with Dr. Thompson's hospital permit for $40,000 next. There were many large individual permits taken out during the month.

The total for May 1923, is five times greater than that for May, 1922, which was $62,325.

AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE WINS ITS BIG MEASURES

While not every measure advocated by the Agricultural Legislative committee was passed in the recent session of the legislature, practically all were approved and sent to the governor. Not a single important fight was lost, and not a bill adverse to the interests of the farmers, succeeded of passage.

"We are well pleased with the results of the session," says R. N. Wilson, secretary of the Agricultural Legislative committee. "We did not get everything we wanted, but we did get everything we needed and there was nothing put over that will harm agriculture. The farmers accomplished this only through organization. It was the legislative committee, backed by its thirty-five commodity organizations with their hundred thousand members, and asisted by the California Farm Bureau Federation, the California Grange and the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union, that was able to get results in legislation."

Two years ago, the first session in which the legislative committee played a part, the farmers for the first time secured recognition, and the value of the organization again was demonstrated this year, its officials say, for agriculture faced a lean year at the hands of the lawmakers, in view of the announced economy program of the administration.

The agricultural budget, which was at first pruned beyond recognition and to the point where the state department of agriculture would have been hampered seriously, was brought back to a figure where it provides well for the needs of the institution; and the college of agriculture budget also was satisfactorily arranged.

Union Pacific to Spend Forty-two Millions for 1923 Improvements

To care for increased business and to better serve its patrons by handling traffic without delay, even during times of peak business, the Union Pacific has entered upon a program of improvements for 1923 estimated to cost $42,817,708, the principal items of which are:

Branch lines and extensions	$ 5,992,837
Equipment	11,547,895
Additional main tracks (double tracking)	5,198,756
Additional yard and passing tracks	3,001,022
Shops, engine houses, tools and machinery	3,992,621
Water and fuel stations	1,802,783
Station and terminal facilities	2,651,771
Property for terminal expansion	1,143,725
Elimination of grade crossings	858,364
Additional signals and interlocking	241,539
Heavier rails	1,907,260
Bridge betterments	2,024,255
Ballasting and other road improvements	2,454,880
Total	$42,817,708

New construction includes a line from Lund to Cedar City, Utah, opening up a territory rich in agriculture, iron and the scenic attractions of Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon and Cedar Breaks; also an alternate main line through Boise, Idaho, and a branch in the Idaho Falls District. A line from Delta to Fillmore, Utah, not included in the foregoing, was completed last month.

The additional main track will provide double track from Omaha to Ogden and Salt Lake, except for 27 miles. With connections east of Omaha, it means 1,515 miles of double track westward from Chicago, the longest continuous stretch of double track in the United States, over which solid through trains are run.

New equipment includes 78 freight locomotives and 57 all-steel passenger train cars. All main line through passenger trains will now be all-steel equipped. These expenditures are in addition to 4,500 box and automobile cars, 45 steel passenger train cars, 80 locomotives and 100 tank cars, purchased last year and delivered this year. Nor do the figures include 8,630 new refrigerator cars of Pacific Fruit Express Company owned jointly by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, purchased in 1922 and 1923, that will be available for the 1923 perishable traffic.

These improvements are in addition to the regular maintenance program. They will be made from new capital and not from earnings. The work will give employment to a vast number of persons in the territory served.

This program is entered upon with a firm belief in the prosperity of the Western states and a confidence that the people in the territory served by the Union Pacific will cooperate in maintaining the railroad at a point of greatest effectiveness.

Constructive suggestions are always welcome.

C. R. GRAY, President.

BIG PREMIUM ON FISTS OVER BRAINS

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, June 1 (United Press).—Pondering over the premium that modern times are putting on brawny fists, a New England scientist recently committed suicide. He couldn't see the justice of conditions which gave two big heavyweights more money for fighting thirty-three miutes than he had been able to earn in a lifetime.

Perhaps his protest against the workings of fate was a bit drastic and futile. He was a master in a profession that has no appeal to the mob. That appeal to the mob means money. There is no kick in watching the skilled hands of a scientist in the laboratory and there is a kick for the mob in watching two giants battle each other about the ring.

Bankers, as well as scientists and educators, can ponder over the rise of pugilism to the world's most paying profession.

Jack Dempsey, at an age when an aspiring young banker is hardly off a high stool, has a fortune. He has made so much out of nothing that he has been able to buy large jobs of valuable real estate and a coal mine.

Before the end of the year, Dempsey probably will be able to buy another coal mine.

The heavyweight champion has before him close to one and a half million dollars, and all he has to do is take the money and the few risks that the taking perhaps involves.

Dempsey will get no less than $300,000 for fighting Tommy Gibbons in Shelby, Montana, on July 4.

If the bout is a tremendous financial success, Dempsey will get more. His manager, Jack Kearns, saw to it when the contract was drawn that the promoters would not make the money that Tex Rickard made off the Dempsey-Carpentier fight.

The champion will get an extra cut on every dollar that the promoters get over a certain sum—if they get it.

After the Gibbons bout, if he wins, Dempsey will fight Harry Wills some time around Labor Day in the vicinity of New York.

It will be more than a million dollar fight, and Dempsey ought to get a half million or more, as his manager is said to be interested in the promotion of the bout, if he is not actually arranging to put it on.

Dempsey, then, if he wins, will go to South America to fight Luis Firpo, and for the "risks" that he will be forced to assume in defending his title among the home folks of a foreigner, the champion will get at least another $500,000.

"THE NIGHTS ARE COOL"

Most all the places I have ever been,
And in my life I've been in quite a lot,
The weather was unusual, that is
It was unseasonably cold or hot.
And always extra blankets on my bed
When I should have warm weather and cold rain
In balmy spring, and always my host said
It would be better when I came again.

And men who would not lie about their deeds,
Their business or quite anything at all,
Will lie about the weather, Winter, Spring,
Will lie about the Summer and the Fall.
Men of high honor and with records clear
In tropic heat and murderous will say:
"We always sleep beneath two blankets here!"
How do good, honest people get that way?

And when the day is raging hot and when
The sun from brazen skies comes blazing down,
They say the air is very dry and men
Don't feel the heat as in some place or town
Where there is more humidity; they seem
To lie by instinct, method, habit, rule;
And if the day is blistering hot they say:
"One thing you'll like—the nights are always cool!"

Yes, in my wrath in frequent time and place
I've said all men were liars and I see
No reason I should change my mind—they are
Where weather is concerned and like to be.
And when my friend came in from the old town
And made complaint about the heat I cried:
"The air is dry and you won't feel it much!"
Just like the others, there I sat—and lied!

Cracks in furniture can be filled in with beeswax. First slightly soften the beeswax until it is like putty, then press firmly nito the cracks and smooth evenly with a thin steel knife. Sandpaper over the surrounding wood and work the dust into the beeswax. This gives a waad finish, or color, and when the furniture is varnished the cracks will have disappeared. Beeswax is better than putty. Putty soon dries, crumbles, and falls out, while beeswax does not.

MINNESOTANS WILL RALLY IN GREAT REUNION

Friday evening, June 1, will be the date of the great Minnesota rally in Music Art hall at 233 South Broadway, Los Angeles. The Duluth folks will supply the program and that assures a fine time. There will be readings, musical numbers, community songs and short talks.

Dancing will close the evening and refreshments will be served. Every Minnesotan is a committee of one to bring the other. Pass the word along to as many as possible. Over one thousand are expected and the hall should be filled.

AMERICANIZATION STUDY DEVELOPS AT UNIVERSITY

With great tides of foreigners flowing daily into our country's ports, the subject of Americanization has become one of vital and wide-spread interest.

Ever-growing is this vast multitude of foreign-speaking people which America must assimilate and develop into citizens through whom must be perpetuated the ideals which inspired our nation's founding.

In California the non-English speaking population offers as serious and vital a problem as in any other state of the union—a fact which has served to make the study of Americanization in university and school one of the popular courses.

Special interest will be attched to this vital subject by the state university in its extensive Americanization course to be featured during the summer session in Los Angeles this year.

Two of the foremost scholars of the United States, Dr. Albert E. Jenks, professor of anthropology and Americanization in the University of Minnesota; and Dr. Frederic P. Woellner, research scholar, Columbia university, will be among the instructors to conduct classes in Americanization, treating of the many vital problems which confront the nation as a whole.

To combat adverse influences it is necessary to understand their cause. Consequently, such courses as problems in Americanization, treating of the present situation in the education of adult immigrants, of adult Americans and of children, are of great value.

Other study courses of similar subjects will consider the characteristics, contributions and distribution of the newer immigrant peoples in America; and the conditions and facts of assimilation of immigrant peoples.

The state university summer session is scheduled for June 30 to August 11. Bulletins outlining the many and interesting study courses are available at the headquarters, 815 Junior Orpheum building, Los Angeles. Telephone 822-401.
